New developments in the Rinaldi NATO spy case. Turkey last week expelled Czech diplomat Karel Patek for trying to buy documents having to do with secret NATO installations (a dozen or more Russian and Iron Curtain diplomats have had to make hurried trips home in last month). . . . Norwegian counterespionage forces have picked up four Norwegian Communists in the far northern Boris Glebe area. Norwegians believe a great deal of NATO information was channeled to Soviet agents in that area, think American tourist Newcomb Mott may have stumbled over one of these operations which would account for his arrest and subsequent staged suicide. . . . Izvestia paid its final respects to Konrad Adenauer, calling him "a knight of the cold war—a title bearing little honor."
